A PRINCELY GIFT

Quarter of a Million To Colby College From Dean of American Professors

A quarter million dollar gift to Colby College from the beloved old Colby professor, Dr. Julian D. Taylor, was announced by President Johnson to students and alumni amid scenes of wildest enthusiasm at the annual Colby Night celebration Friday evening.

This the first gift towards the "New Campus for Old Colby" project of sufficient size to build one of the new buildings is conditioned upon the raising of the balance of the necessary $3,000,000 within three years.

Dr. Taylor, at the age of 85, is the dean of American professors, having taught Latin at Colby for 63 years, a record unequalled in this country. Last June he retired from the faculty, although as professor-emeritus, he still conducts the senior Latin course. During the summer he was elected to the board of trustees of Colby College by a record-breaking unanimous vote of the alumni body and was honored by Gov. Gardiner of Maine by the title: "The Grand Old Man of Maine."

He was one of the speakers at the annual convention of the Three-Quarter Century Club in Camden last summer.

Director Crie Home From Canadian Look-See Tells What Is Necessary For Industry

"Something must be done if the lobster fishermen on the Maine coast are to earn a living wage, fishing for lobsters in the future," said Director H. D. Crie to a Courier-Gazette reporter yesterday.

"Miracles have happened in the past and they may happen now to improve conditions, but I believe, after visiting Canada and studying conditions there, that the only way possible for the Maine fishermen to get adequate returns for their labor is the enactment of Federal Law, prohibiting the shipment into United States markets of lobsters which measure less than three and one half inches, eye socket measure, or the air at this time for the unemployed and if they do not make a drive for themselves they will soon be among the unemployed because they cannot earn a sufficient amount to keep soul and body together and build a new string of traps. When their old equipment is worn out they will have to enter the great army of unemployed, if something is not done to remedy conditions. It will not be necessary for them to do that if they get busy and make a drive for Federal law, that will prohibit the importation of chicken lobsters, the lobsters that glut our markets, and control the price. This is the time for every fisherman and every person interested to show whether he is interested enough in the future of that great God-given resource—the lobster industry, to work or to sit down and let it go by default. The whole situation lies in your hands and the future depends on your effort."

"I am willing to do and am doing all I can to help them. I have visited practically all the lobster producing States in an effort to make the Commissioners and fishermen understand the seriousness of the situation. I have been to Canada to study conditions there as previously stated. I have just returned from Boston where I attended an annual meeting of the Lobster Fishermen's Association at which more than 100 members were present and all seemed anxious to have something done to remedy conditions. I firmly believe that by a united effort we can accomplish what we desire, a federal law adopting a measure for lobsters, large enough to eliminate the importation of chicken lobsters into the United States markets and prohibit the shipment of lobster meat to our markets. When the tariff is opened up again to get a tariff sufficiently large to put our lobster fishing industry on a level with Canada in the cost of production. All the above mentioned conditions must be remedied before I shall be satisfied that our fishermen and dealers are getting the protection that they honestly deserve."

Director H. D. Crie Who Warns That Chicken Lobsters Must Go

law Maine has today. When such a law is passed it will eliminate the so-called chicken lobster which is a drug on the market and controls the price.

"The past week Commissioner W. H. Thurston and I have visited Canada and have gathered all the information we could regarding the catch of lobsters, the way they are shipped to United States markets, closed seasons, etc.

"With all the lobster fishing ground there is in Canada and the way the closed and open seasons are operated, I see no reason why Canada cannot continue forever supplying the United States markets with lobsters at a price that is impossible for the Maine fishermen to compete with. For example, we will take the Shediac Coast, which includes Northumberland Strait and Prince Edward Island. The season opens Aug. 15 and closes Oct. 15 so there is but two months fishing. When the season opens the fishermen get from 1000 to 1200 pounds of lobsters each day that they haul their traps, and as the season draws to a close the lobsters get scarcer until the last of the fishing when a fisherman gets from 250 to 300 pounds when he hauls his traps. After that season closes another opens up and so on for nearly 11 months of each year, so you can readily see that Canada is pouring into the United States markets quantities of lobsters more than 10 months each year and with a closed season of nearly 10 months for each locality it gives the lobster a great opportunity to breed and restock the grounds before the fishing begins another year."

"Lobsters are taken in such large quantities when the season is opened to fishing that they not only glut the United States markets but also plug the canneries to such an extent that quantities are wasted and sold at a price reduced to such a low level that no one can make any money. If the chickens were eliminated, then the markets would take care of the supply at a fairly remunerative price but until some way is devised to entirely eliminate them our Maine fishermen will continue to work for starvation wages."

"The banquet and meeting held at the Thorndike Sept. 4, was for the sole purpose of giving the fishermen a chance to tell their troubles first hand to the Senators and Congressmen, so that if a bill is presented in Congress the coming winter that the Maine Senators and Representatives can tell their colleagues just what is actually necessary to protect the lobster fishermen of the United States from foreign competition that deprives them of a living wage by reducing the price of lobsters to such an extent that they cannot make a dollar above the cost of production. Such conditions should not be allowed."

"I am doing my utmost to remedy conditions but it is not a one man job, but it is actually necessary for every person interested in the future of the lobster business in Maine to lend a helping hand and for every fisherman and dealer to do everything he can to help. They should take an interest in the future of their business, and write their Congressmen when that body convenes in December, telling them their troubles and asking them to help. A personal letter will do more good than a petition containing a hundred names."

"Talk federal lobster laws morning, noon and night. Drives are in the

SAM MORRILL SAYS

That There'll Be Snow Next Week—With Thanksgiving Day Probably Cloudy and Mild

Sam P. Morrill, Lewiston's weather prophet frequently quoted in the State papers, submits his forecast for the month of November.

The temperature and precipitation will be normal to above normal, Sam says, with the last part of the month the warmest.

November will come in fair and cool, remarks Morrill, the first 10 or 12 days with probable snow during the second week. There will be three storm periods during the month, the first from the 3rd to the 9th; the second from the 14th to the 20th and the third and worst if there is any difference from the 25th to the 30th.

Thanksgiving Day will be cloudy at midday. Sam ventured to remark, "I'm not going to say anything about earthquakes this month," he continued, "though I've struck it pretty near during the summer and fall. We're liable to get some though, along about the third week," he concluded.

HATS OFF TO HENRY CLUKEY

Rockland Reinsman Was Second In the United States As To Number of Races Won

When Henry J. Clukey, the well known Rockland horseman, outlined his campaign for the season, he closed it was with the ambition that he might lead other reinsmen in the number of races won in this State. On the home stretch of the season it was apparent that his desire had been gratified, for with 32 races won, finding himself only one behind the money the records showed that he had distanced all other Maine competitors.

Mr. Clukey was scarcely prepared for the happy surprise which awaited him one day last week when he received a letter apprising him of the fact that he ranked second in the United States with respect to the number of races won.

Parshall, was, as usual, out front, with 54 winners. His best performers were the Bingen Silk trotter Ankabar and the Napoleon Direct pacer Napoleon Grant, each of which was credited with eight victories, the former with a mark of 2:01, and the latter with a mark of 2:01.

Parshall's other winners included General Walker, Hollywood Lexington, Counterpart, Norman Peter, Royal Guv. J. E. Vonian, Joe Lewis, Worthy Burton and Rose Princeton.

The following drivers won the number of races after their names:

Parshall, 54	Stokes, 21
Clukey, 32	Fitzpatrick, 20
Bull, 31	Keyes, 19
Philburn, 30	H. Brusie, 19
McMillan, 28	Chappell, 18
Carnal, 27	Erskine, 18
Mabrey, 26	Goodhart, 17
Cameron, 25	Mott, 17
Hodson, 24	L. Brusie, 15
Vie Fleming, 23	Daniels, 15
Noble, 22	W. Caton, 15
Palin, 21	Crozier, 14
Egan, 21	Pitman, 14

Clukey is especially proud of being the runner-up in this race, as he campaigned only eight horses, while Parshall had nearly 100 according to reports which seep through into Maine stables.

Five of the horses driven by Clukey were his own property—Peter Simmons, 2:09 1/4, by Count Dasso, winner of nine races; Gwendolen Aubrey, 2:09 1/4, by Capt. Aubrey, eight races; Harwah 2:12 by Harvest Worthy, five; Miss Abbe, 2:08 1/4, by The Abbe; three races; Rance, 2:15, by Worthy Peter, three races.

Clukey also drove Frankie G. 2:10, owned by Edmund Webb of Bangor, as a winner in two races; Comet Harvey, 2:09 1/4, by The Harvester, owned by Del Stratton of Albion, winner in one race; and Russell Direct, 2:16, by Empire Direct, owned by Mr. Taylor of Union, a winner in one race.

The Rockland horseman's campaign began July Fourth, when he appeared in one race, and wound up in Sturbridge, Mass., when his name again ranked on the winning list. His grand total of 32 victories is 11 larger than last year.

Clukey, who is a native of Dexter, has been driving 18 years, beginning when he was scarcely more than a kid. He has been a resident of Rockland four years.

Among the well known horse owners who signed him up in the days before he assembled his own stable, were John Kelley of Bangor and George W. Bachelder of Rockland.

Dame Fortune certainly smiled upon Clukey when he put him in the way of buying Peter Simmons at Bangor, for a pittance of $200. The ownership was split four ways at the start, but Clukey gave the other three $1500 for their interest, and events proved that his judgment in horseflesh had not gone astray. Peter Simmons continued a consistent winner, and rumor has it that his lucky owner could be doubled his money at the end of the season, exclusive of Peter's winnings.

In fact there have been many horsemen to cast covetous eyes at the Clukey stable not overlooking the well known Squair brothers of Hartford, who deal in race horses on a large scale.

On every track in Maine where his horses have been campaigned Henry Clukey has the reputation of being a square shooter, and his cleverness as a driver is a topic wherever horsemen gather. He modestly attributes the success of his horses to the care bestowed upon them by the caretaker, Teddy Clukey, who, by the way, is his nephew.

Among those who early congratulated Mr. Clukey was G. M. Hatch of New Vineyard well known in turf circles as "Milton." "I think," he wrote, "that you put four in the 2:10 list, something I do not recall any other Maine trainer doing in one season."

And for the benefit of horsemen at large here is just a glance at what the other leading reinsmen did:

Parshall won thirty-one races with nine horses; Cindy M. Jr. proved the star of his stable.

Philburn dropped into the Grand Circuit at Cleveland but swung back to the half-mile tracks in New York State after winning with Hollywood Knight.

The Ohio trainer McMillan who made everybody sit up and take notice a few years ago when he won a feature event at Toledo with Peter Clukey had a good season. This year his leader was Worthy Wood by Outslider, a son of Guy Axworthy. On the opening day at Lexington he finished second to Allie Pluto in 2:04 1/4.

Carnal, another Ohio reinsman, won 27 races. Joe Watts was his star, his outstanding performance being at Grand Rapids where he cut his record to 2:03 1/4.

Charley Mabrey's campaign was limited to New England except for a side trip to Lexington where he won the Walnut Hall Cup with Allie Pluto in 2:01 1/4.

Horace Cameron won 13 of his 25 races with the three-year-old trotter MacAlway by Mr. McElwyn.

Peter Patch was the leader in the Hodson stable and made a new three heat record of 2:02 1/4, 2:02 1/4, 2:02 1/4 at Indianapolis. Hodson won six races with Peter Patch and six with Short Hills.

Vic Fleming won 22 races with five horses. The Young Senator was his leader.

Noble had charge of the Hanover Shoe Farms half-mile track stable which was raced at the fairs in Pennsylvania and Delaware. He started in 27 races of which he won 22.

Sep Palin's 21 firsts in 1931 were earned by 11 horses, of which Star Etawah was the most successful.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION

State Chapters Meet At Montpelier and Honor the Memory of General Knox

For several years there has been a tacit agreement among the thirty-two chapters of the Maine State Daughters of the American Revolution, to devote the November meeting to the interests of the Knox Memorial. From its inception the State organization has shown warm interest in and sympathy with the movement to honor General Knox, and

Rev. Walter S. Rounds, pastor of the Congregational Church of Rockland, in his brief address expressed his keen interest in the Knox Memorial, and took the opportunity to refer humorously to the characteristic determination of the ladies in making the memorial possible, traits inherited from their forebears.

A lovely corsage bouquet was presented to Mrs. Danforth by both Chapters, the presentation being made by Mrs. Creighton. An outstanding feature of the afternoon was the presentation of a Knox chair to Montpelier by Mrs. Rachel J. Elwell of Philadelphia, a lady of 90 years who has a summer home in Bath. Owing to her advanced years Mrs. Elwell was not able to be present, but the presentation was made through the Colonel Dummer Sewall Chapter of Bath, which sent a committee headed by Mrs. Charles C. Low of Bath, who made a very fitting presentation speech. Other members of that committee were Miss Margaret R. Foote, regent of the Chapter, Mrs. John A. Morse, past State regent, Clara M. Fogg, and Miss Alice Barney.

Other gifts included a silver teaspoon of the beautiful Knox design, unique as being the only teaspoon of that pattern among the tablespoons and dessert spoons given by Dr. Henry Thatcher Fowler, this gift presented by Miss Mary Nicholson and Mrs. J. A. Levensaler. Also a most interesting letter from Henry Knox Thatcher written to Rev. R. Woodhull of Thomaston in 1855, given by Miss Annie E. Gerry of Boston, formerly of Thomaston. An original deed to the town of Cushing with the signature of Henry and Lucy Knox, dated March 4, 1801, was given by Mrs. Lois M. Creighton; the deed was drawn up by her grandfather, James Malcolm, esq. of Cushing. A framed copy of a deed from Gen. Knox to Sarah Waldo, dated July 30, 1799, was presented by Mrs. Lucie P. Madden of Old Town of the Frances Dighton Williams Chapter.

The meeting was closed with the singing of "America," led by Miss Hortense Wilson of Thomaston.

Among out of town guests were Mrs. Alice Fry Briggs of Patuxent, N. J., daughter of the late Senator Frye and a past recording secretary general of the National Congress, D. A. R.; Arthur G. Staples, editor of the Lewiston Journal, and Mrs. Staples; Miss Jane Tucker of Wiscasset, and Mrs. John Tyler Gay of Waldoboro.

Tea was served in the carriage room of the mansion, which was transformed by a clever arrangement of evergreen trees and huge bunches of gorgeous autumn leaves arranged in handsome old brass and copper kettles. A large American flag was also displayed on the walls. The long tea table was laid with an exquisite damask cloth, and having a centerpiece of rich orange calendula arranged in an orange pottery bowl. Lighted candles in candelabra flanked the centerpiece, and at one end was an old silver tea service which at the other end of the table, Mrs. Alice Karl, Mrs. Marie Coppeland, Miss Jane Tucker and Miss Hortense Wilson.

The meeting was held in the oval room, the only decorations other than the beautiful furnishings being a large bouquet of late garden flowers with snapdragons predominating. And a large American flag, Mrs. Anne Snow, regent of the Knox Chapter, called the meeting to order and her Chapter postponed all business. Then Mrs. Mary Overlock, regent of General Knox Chapter, did likewise, after which the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Lois M. Creighton who as chairman of the committee of arrangements for the day presided. Mrs. Creighton is also State chairman of the committee on the Knox Memorial of the Maine D. A. R. Her address included a resume of the erection of Montpelier, how the work was begun by General Knox Chapter and only made possible through the cooperation of Lady Knox Chapter and many other friends, among whom stands prominent Hon. Cyrus H. K. Curtis whose generosity has been very great. Tribute was also paid to Mrs. Kathleen S. Fuller, who as chairman of house furnishings has worked untiringly on the project and displayed such exquisite taste.

Mrs. Danforth was then introduced, and her gracious address dwelt on the aims of the D. A. R. organization.

DONE IN JANUARY

That the Latest Guess In Regard To New Wiscasset Bridge

Many Knox County persons who motor to Bath with much interest in the progress on the new Wiscasset bridge, which will be 3250 feet long. At the eastern, or Davis Island end, the work was begun at a distance 50 feet from the old structure. The car space will be 22 feet in width, and the sidewalk, which will be on the south side, five feet. The "bents" are the series of piles placed side by side nine in number, the width of the bridge, the two outer ones acting as braces. Each bent has a heavy timber cap on which the ends of the steel stringers rest. These stringers are 26 feet long, allowance being properly made for the expansion and contraction of the steel. The new draw, to be built to complete the number of bents to be set. And the new bridge is yet to meet the old one—at a point perhaps 150 feet east of the draw—so that the time to be consumed from then on cannot be easily reckoned. The month of January is a wise guess for the completion of the structure.

And then there's the speak-easy proprietor who got raided and sued the policeman on the beat for breach of promise.—Los Angeles Examiner.

Went John Paul of Houlton Who Escaped From Thomaston In 1930

An irresistible desire to continue a habit of taking things which did not belong to him Friday resulted in the capture of John Paul of Houlton, who escaped from State Prison last year after serving six months of a two year sentence for the larceny of a car at Houlton in 1929.

Paul was captured in Ludlow Friday by a posse led by State Trooper Marks as he was resting at a house on the back road. The officers are satisfied that Paul is the man who stole cars belonging to B. E. Jones of Houlton Sunday night.

Paul, who is 29, has a record of escaping from both the Aroostook county jail and States Prison, saving his way out of the jail in 1925 and duplicating the feat at Thomaston in 1929 when he took French leave from the hog house where he was working as a trusty.

His arrest climaxed three nights of investigating by sheriffs and Marks. The former received a tip Friday morning which resulted in the arrest. Officers from Thomaston took Paul back to the prison.

SONG

Go, lovely rose,
Tell her that wastes her time and me,
That now she knows
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.

Tell her that's young,
And shuns to have her grace spoiled,
That hadst thou sprung
In deserts, where no men abide,
Thou must have remained died.

Small is the worth
Of beauty from the light retired;
Bid her come forth,
Suffer herself to be desired,
And not blush so to be admired.

Then dip that she
The common fate of all things rare
May read in thee,
How small a part of time they share,
That are so wondrous sweet and fair.

THE THRIFT SHOP

The broadening duties of that highly commendable enterprise—The Thrift Shop—have resulted in the creation of another committee which will attend to the soliciting and collection of clothing, with Miss Charlotte Buffum at the head. "We need everything," Miss Buffum explained—"clothes, underclothes and shoes for men, women and children, and we would like to have all citizens understand that they may expect an early call from the committee, which earnestly hopes that all will do their share."

The social organizations are especially urged to co-operate. Articles which to many persons may appear to have little value can be put to use by the committee, so throw nothing away.

SAVING YOUR MONEY

Here is a catalogue from a leading publishing house, listing nearly two hundred books that discuss in able fashion subjects having to do with business in its multitudinous forms, and pointing out the paths of them which necessarily must be pursued to success at the end of them to be attained. Noted business men and financial advisors here voice opinions and advice that should recommend themselves to the judgment of the worker and investor. It were to be wished that the study of such literature could assure to every student the achievement of his ambitions, but after all there is the personal equation to be reckoned with, and that its tremendously important. We know of successful men in our own city, who began their boyhood working days by "hooking on time," a process of vessel loading belonging to the old lime-burning era. Fifty cents a day was the wage, and a considerable part of this three dollars a week, a boy we have in mind, a boy who was to succeed, laid by.

When later he found a clerk's job at four dollars a week, this detail of saving continued. It was the early formed habit of thrift that insured the ultimate success, a habit as old as history and as potent today as it ever was. The men of financial achievement who are to be pillars in the business structure of the Rockland of 1970, are the boys of the present time, who in place of blowing into the open channels of amusement every nickel that comes their way, are learning that fundamental of the Scots, that many a mickle makes a muckle, and that providence is on the side of the nest-egg laid in that fertile incubator, the bank.

STARTING THE CHILD RIGHT

"Fewer jazz mothers." This the reply of Warden Linscott to the question. What is the cure for those classes of criminality which have their beginnings in the home through lack of proper family discipline? A great percentage of prison inmates, he declares, are the product of that unfortunate childhood environment, followed by the natural steps of the juvenile court, the reform school, the adult reformatory, then the prison, of which final institution they become habitual inmates. If this seems to lay a heavy responsibility upon the mothers it logically points to the need of a revival of the old-fashioned home. Not that we ever went without these institutions of punishment and reform, but they appear to have presented to them today problems that were not so difficult in earlier generations to deal with. Or perhaps people didn't so much take notice.

FRIENDLY REJOINDER

A little story, lately printed in this column, associated with the tailoring business, and employed to illustrate certain familiar traits in British character, has elicited from Tetley & Butler, the London tailors whose names were frankly used in the connection, a pretty little note of appreciation which we are tempted to pass on to our readers.

Firstly, (so the note begins) as the "man of the street," and secondly as tailors, we thank you and are grateful for your leader on "British Persistence," written in beautiful English and published in your issue of Sept. 29. This article we shall always treasure. We should like to record that this persistence upon our part had brought its reward. During the past twelve months we received orders which were the means of dispatching clothes and effects to 51 different countries.

Regarding the general business situation, we of England suffer with the majority of the world, but we look across the water to our kinsmen, who we know have the grit and determination to start the ball rolling upon a new period of prosperity.

HEARD SAM IRWIN

Forty Club Gave New Airport Manager An Enthusiastic Welcome

The Forty Club yesterday made the acquaintance of Sam Irwin, new manager of the Curtis-Wright Airport and gave him an enthusiastic greeting. His splendid war record was known to the club from other sources and contributed largely to the warmth of his reception.

Leutenant Irwin learned aviation while in Germany with the Army of Occupation and mastered it with characteristic thoroughness. He has been with the Curtis-Wright organization since 1929, serving in many capacities, coming to Rockland from the Glenn Curtiss Airport in New York where he was assistant manager.

He discussed briefly the new policy of Curtis-Wright Flying Service. In the past the company has had to pioneer, blazing the trail for air taxi, flying instruction, and other special service, and will continue this work, extending where practical. This work has resulted in the development of some 500 aerial service organizations and hereafter Curtis-Wright will provide these people with service rather than competition.

But in general the policy will be to concentrate on sales and service to private owners and operators of air craft.

This new policy will be put into vigorous operation at the local port with the company providing the best of service, fuels, repair parts, planes, engines and instruments. The service will also include parts, planes and accessories of other than the Curtis-Wright products. Next Monday's meeting of the club will be an Armistice observation in charge of Col. Basil H. Stinson.

"ON MY SET"

Hundreds of Rockland radio fans are tuning in on the Saturday football games, many of them gaining their first insight into the grand fall sport. Watching the Maine-Colby game at Waterville Saturday I wondered how folks at home were liking the broadcast, and upon reaching Rockland I had occasion to marvel at the closeness with which the radio listeners had been able to follow the contest.

Several stations will carry a play by play description of the annual football encounter between Dartmouth and Harvard, Saturday afternoon, with Graham McNamee as commentator.

WGNY will introduce a series of talks on municipal government, Saturday, at 7.15 p. m. The purpose of the series is to give the average citizen a picture of the problems of municipal government. The series is sponsored by the New York State Conference of Mayors.

Those who have followed "Uncle Dan'l Dickey," as the leading man in the "Snow Village" radio playlets broadcast by Socoyland, will hear him in a new role when the Socoyland Players broadcast "Grandsir" Nov. 9. For "Uncle Dan'l" as this final episode of "Grandsir" will prove, has inherited a family of four children! As was explained in the first broadcast of "Grandsir," that aged man was taken in by "Old Neville," "Dan'l's" "Snow Village" rival. Finally driven by cold and lack of "pork in his beans" to seek shelter at the home of "Uncle Dan'l" and "Aunt Hattie," the aged gentleman becomes a burden to all in "Dan'l's" household. An appeal is made to "Grandsir's" daughter and what does she do but arrive to care for him, bringing four children to keep her company.

Planes, Pilots—and Passengers

(By F. V. F.)

A new use for planes, at least in this part of the country, has been discovered by Arthur L. Orne who is one of the most consistent users of air transportation among the business men of Rockland. A summer estate on Islesboro had to be inspected for renewal of fire insurance policies. Orne was on Vinalhaven when Stan Boynton came over on the 4 o'clock run. For a slight additional charge Stan flew over Islesboro on the return trip circling the property to be inspected and Orne was able to see from the air better than he could have from the ground, what new structures had been built, how far they were from the house, and to judge whether certain changes in the roof and chimneys would affect the trip. Without a plane this inspection trip would have required a whole day and could not have been done one whit more thoroughly.

Orne, long ago, learned that when he flies somewhere on business the men he calls on are more ready to see him and talk business than when he travels by the usual means. The fact that an airplane is waiting for him, or that he values his time enough to travel by plane, has a decided effect in speeding up business interviews. This advantage to air travel has been noticed by business men all over the country. Stan Boynton says that some of the merchants on the islands who are expecting salesmen to come by plane even drive to the landing and meet them with a car.

Ted Esslinger was reminiscing recently on the busy days in the summer of '27 when pilots were anxiously waiting at Valley Stream for favorable weather for starting their trans-Atlantic flights. All of them realized the risk they took and the strain of waiting for the opportunity to risk their lives showed on each.

Lindbergh slept very little. He was in New York almost every night at theatres, night clubs and other places where there were crowds. When he finally took off he had with him only two sandwiches and some coffee for nourishment. When asked some time ago, "Don't you want some more food?" his answer was, "No. If I get to Paris two sandwiches will be plenty. If I don't it'll be too much."

Clarence Chamberlin sat in his car outside the hangar day after day reading the newspapers while his ship and engine were being groomed for the flight. His reply to all inquiries as to how soon he was leaving was: "Pretty soon, now." Roger G. Williams spent most of his time working on his charts, studying maps and other details of his navigation. When Ted Esslinger him good luck just before the take off he said, "We'll need it." All were calm but preoccupied, showing their detachment in little ways like picking up a stone and throwing it out onto the field. And when the time came for each to go he stepped into his plane without hesitation and started his flight. There was no time for him to think of it at the time. It was a step to which each steered himself in advance and no doubt each had the feeling one of them expressed in confidence while waiting his time to go: "It's too late to turn back now."

It seems odd that with all his diversified interests and his incalculable contributions to society, the late Thomas A. Edison only once experimented with aeronautics, and that time without success. According to the Literary Digest the only time he devoted himself to aeronautics was when he tried to develop a helicopter in the early days of flying. He devised an internal combustion engine depending upon a ticket tape impregnated with dynamite for power. The machine was wrecked when carbon in the cylinder caused the tape to preignite, and Edison never afterwards showed any prolonged interest in aviation.

The airport was a gathering place for pilots from all over the State while Inspector Hoyt was here Friday. George Shaw flew down from Caribou in an OX-Travel Air with Elwood Kelly who took his private pilot's exam. Franny Ahlblad came in with an OX-Eagle-rock belonging to Frank True's Elixir was licensed by the inspector. Two model F Wacos arrived, one belonging to Marden of Waterville, the other to C. W. Cross of Madison. The latter was flown over by L. E. Astles who came in to have his license renewed.

IN A BLAZE OF GLORY

Rockland High School Is Closing Football Season—Camden Outclassed By Brilliant Work

In a game featured by long runs and forward passing by Bernard Freeman, the catching of these passes by Dick Knowlton and Norm Connors, and the blocking of the Rockland team, with Connors and Gray outstanding in this department, the local High School eleven romped over the Camden High aggregation for the second successive time this year and when the final whistle blew the Manticook team was on the short end of a 28 to 0 score. The Orange and Black outfit scored early in the first period and added other counters in each of the following frames.

The first touchdown came after Freeman and Karl had carried the ball to the Camden 40 yard line, and a long pass, Freeman to Connors, put the ball on the visitors' 12 yard marker. A 15 yard penalty was then imposed on Rockland for illegal use of the hands but two more rushes put the ball inside Camden's 10 yard line and Freeman circling his own left end behind the excellent blocking of Grey went over the goal line standing up. From then on the locals found it easy going, and with its passing attack working nothing short of perfection, rolled up a score that was twice as large as it had previously rolled up against the same team a week before.

One of the prettiest plays of the afternoon was executed in the following period with only a few minutes left to play before half time. With the ball in midfield, in Rockland's possession, Pietroski went back and tossed a lateral to Freeman who ran wide to the sidelines drawing in the Camden secondary leaving Knowlton in the clear. Freeman then whipped a long forward to Knowlton and the latter raced the remaining 20 yards untouched and unharmed.

This Freeman to Knowlton passing combination worked continuously through the game. In the third period it resulted in a touchdown, and in the fourth quarter, with eight reserves playing, the pair again scored on the Camden outfit. In this final period Rockland tried its "basketball" play, which consisted of a forward pass and a couple of laterals hitched on the end of it, and it scored but Referee Mahan ruled that the first lateral was thrown a little ahead, so the score did not count.

Although the Camden team failed to score it was by no means through the fault of Alexander, Redman and Greenlaw as these Camden linemen were the only ones to show up well against the stronger Rockland machine. While these three boys were outstanding in the visitor's defense the work of Achorn, Haskell, Mazzeo and Doyle was the highlight in the Rockland line. The offensive work of Freeman and Knowlton was also very good, and the blocking exhibition given by Connors and Grey was something that made the spectators feel as though they had their money's worth.

ESTABLISHED The Judges Have Decided

Chiropractic is now established and growing in every civilized country.
American judges have decided in open court that it is an honorable member of the healing professions. Thirty-nine States have laws giving it legal recognition and protection.

Twenty thousand Chiropractic doctors in the United States alone have treated not fewer than 10,000,000 patients.
These patients include some of our greatest national characters, professional and business people, musicians, theatrical folk, athletes, world champion prize fighters, world champion wrestlers and members of the big league ball teams. Many of these today depend on Chiropractic to help them to do their best work.

More than 100 life and accident insurance companies, fraternal organizations and state industrial commissions make use of Chiropractic in caring for their sick or injured.

Chiropractic hospitals are proving very successful in handling difficult cases, including mental cases.
About a year ago 300 hospitalized World War veterans in Colorado petitioned the President to furnish them with Chiropractic services because they were spending their own funds for such help.

Everybody should know this profession for what it is and what it does.

There will be a special matinee for children Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Strand Theatre, showing "Palm Days," with Eddie Cantor.

A. W. McCurdy, Maine Central ticket agent, who has been quite seriously ill, was able to sit up Sunday for the first time, and is making excellent progress.

Walter E. Staples of Cedar street who recently underwent a serious surgical operation at Knox Hospital, is gradually improving but not yet able to leave the hospital.

Woodbury, Richards has moved from Thomaston into the Richards house, Bunker street, lately occupied by Albert Mills, the latter having moved to Main street, near the corner of Rockland street.

"The Green Pastures" is scheduled for the Belfast Reading Club on Nov. 18, to be read by Rev. T. G. Akeley, vicar of St. Margaret's Church. There are many who recall the fine interpretation of this play by Mrs. Lillian S. Copping before the Rubinstein Club last March.

Mrs. Alice M. Spear of Old County road recently dug a mass of dandelion greens, and in the center of one was a fresh blossom.—Flora Belle and American Beauty roses grown by Mrs. Colby Moore of 62 Willow street were added to The Courier-Gazette's interesting collection yesterday; also a wonderful bouquet of dahlias from the garden of Mrs. Charles A. Studley.

Sunday Nov. 22 has been fixed as the date for the motion picture benefit for Rockland's unemployed, but whether it will be given in one or both of the local theatres has not been decided. The free use of both picture houses is given, no charge will be made for the use of the pictures, and both theatre staffs will donate their services. Every cent of the gross receipts will go into the unemployment fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman S. Young have named their new summer home at Glenmere, "The Delaware," and officially opened it Sunday, when a buffet luncheon prepared in the fireplace was served. The guests were Judge E. K. Gould and family, Austin Gardner and Nina Gardner of Rockland, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Harbach and family of Bangor and Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Javins of Pittsburg.

Miss deCeu, assistant superintendent of the Navy Nurse Corps gave a very interesting illustrated lecture before the staff of nurses of Knox Hospital, the alumni members and other nurses in the community Friday evening at the Bok Memorial Home for Nurses. Miss deCeu's subject was "The Educational Value of Navy Nursing," and among the many points stressed, those of the value of travel and the facilities provided Navy nurses were particularly emphasized. Navy nurses bear the ranking of officers, and the greater part of their work is confined to supervising and teaching. Miss deCeu's lecture stands as one of the most interesting talks ever given before the nurses.

The goal post war which had its inception last year with Rockland and Camden High Schools as contenders broke forth anew this year. A week ago last Saturday the Camden posts were smashed and the offense was charged against the Orange and Black disciples. Sunday the affair was duplicated at Community Park and nine Camden boys were said to be involved. Five of them were brought before Judge Miles in Rockland Municipal Court and were given some excellent advice. "While it is true that goal posts are often carried away by the victors after a football game, it would almost seem that the same amount of energy applied to the game itself, would give the public better results. But boys will be boys—even after they have grown up.

Henry E. Comins, Maine Central station agent, is having his annual vacation, and accompanied by Frank P. Trafton and John G. Snow is in Washington County after big game.

Freeman S. Young has sold his farm at Matinicus to Edgar F. Cooper of Wollaston, Mass. Among his other recent deals was the sale of the property in Camden, owned by A. E. Spear of Warren, to Mrs. Nellie M. Blood of Camden.

Knox County football fans saw Maine defeat Colby 19 to 7 at Waterville Saturday. While the Orono aggregation undoubtedly had the edge the game was not nearly as one-sided as the score sounds. Bates had no trouble defeating the Brunswick scapegoats 30 to 0. Bowdoin is apparently in for its third trouncing Saturday at Orono, but may astonish the natives, as it did a year ago.

An official visit to King Hiram's Council, R.S.M., will be made Friday night by Grand Master Warren Nichols of Belfast who will inspect the organization. The assembly will open at 4 p. m., chicken supper will be served at 6 and in the evening all of the degrees will be worked. The Band will give a concert and the Patrol will present its drill. The supper will be served by Golden Rod Chapter at 50 cents the plate.

One of the most remarkable sights in Eastern Maine today is the new bridge which extends across the Penobscot River between Prospect and Verona Island. Higher than the Brooklyn Bridge it is a massive structure, already open to foot travel, and ready for the first great cavalcade of motor cars in about two weeks, a Courier-Gazette reporter was told Sunday, when he was one of more than 1000 visitors to the scene. On the bronze tablet at either end of the bridge is engraved the name of a Knox County man, Zelma M. Dival of Camden, a member of the commission under whose direction it was erected. With the completion of the structure there remains a balance of $200,000, which will be used in the construction of another new bridge between Verona Island and the mainland at Bucksport. For the benefit of those who have not already visited the new bridge here's a tip—take the right hand turn in passing through Stockton Springs. It is a shorter and better road.

STRAND THEATRE

Promised as an innovation in screen musical comedy, Eddie Cantor's newest picture, "Palm Days," will be presented Wednesday and Thursday as successor to the goggle-eyed comic's inaugural "Whoopee" of last season.

Eddie appears as an unwilling assistant to a gang of crooked fortune tellers and spiritualists, planning to wreck a bakery by installing Eddie as an efficiency expert. The story was written by Cantor, Morrie Ryskind and David Freedman. It is a rowdy comic strip kind of a yarn moving blithely from the phoney mystic's holy of holies to the splendor of a futuristic bakery,—one of those Rube Goldberg bakeries, "manned" by an imposing assemblage of Hollywood's most decorative femininity,—to the Ziegfeldian opulence of a swimming pool scene, with 100 prize bathing beauties competing with equality proud swans for attention, to a moonlit garden party with young love cooing among the lilac bushes, and on and on. Barbara ("Bobbie") Weeks, Goldwyn's newest and most-talked-of screen discovery, makes her screen debut at the head of the battalion of Hollywood's most beautiful girls.

Song hits in abundance are promised, the first of which is likely to be in Eddie's ditty, "Yes, Yes." Most of the songs are the work of those popular music masters, Con Conrad and Cliff Friend. Among them are "Bend Down, Sister," which has a kind of negro spiritual tenor, and "Goose Pimples," both of which command the able assistance of Miss Greenwood, and a strictly gag comedy song, "Dunk, Dunk, Dunk,"—adv.

WERE JOINTLY INSTALLED

American Legion Auxiliary Units Are Inducted Into Office At Thomaston

The American Legion Auxiliary units of Rockland, Thomaston, Camden and Union held a joint installation Friday evening, with the Auxiliary of Williams-Brazier Post of Thomaston as hosts. There were about 70 present, the meeting taking place in the new Legion rooms which are very attractive and comfortable.

Mrs. Bertha Abbott of South Paris, vice president of the Second District, installed, with Mrs. Anne Snow of Rockland as sergeant at arms. The Rockland officers installed were: President, Mrs. Ella Hyland; first vice president, Mrs. Elizabeth Barton; second vice president, Mrs. Clara Kelsey; chaplain, Mrs. Susie Lamb; secretary, Mrs. Blanche Morton; treasurer, Miss Pearl Borgerson; historian, Mrs. Margaret Kelley; sergeant-at-arms, Miss Margaret Nutt.

At the close of the installing ceremonies, Mrs. Abbott presented a very interesting report of the national convention at Detroit and outlined the plans made by the national organization for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Snow gave a talk concerning the poppy program, and the incoming presidents made brief remarks.

During a social hour refreshments were served.

The Rockland Lions have their regular meeting tomorrow noon, and the speaker will be Capt. Ernest Torrey. "Duke" vouchers for the program and is going to be present, himself.

"Doc" Hall will continue his South American adventures in the near future. Several members are planning to attend the Waldoboro ladies' night tomorrow night.

An analysis of checking accounts in 29 Maine Trust Companies brought out the surprising fact that 65.6 per cent of the accounts maintained an average balance of $26.92.

Also, it showed that this 65.6 per cent of the accounts represented only 5.3 per cent of the total checking deposits.

This condition indicates that these Maine Trust Companies are carrying over one-half of their checking accounts at a loss.

Figure that it costs a bank approximately 3 1/2 cents for each check drawn to furnish checking account service. Estimate that each checking account draws a minimum of 12 checks a month.

Figure the bank's possible income from checking account balances, (85 per cent of the average daily balance loaned at an average of not over 5 per cent interest) and the result is the profit or loss the bank makes on each of these accounts.

This condition is not peculiar to Maine Trust Companies or to Maine banks as a whole. It is a national problem which has received the close attention of bankers and economists for several years. The average ratio of accounts to deposits for all Maine Commercial banks is closely in line with the Trust Company figures.

The cost of furnishing checking account service includes supplying free check books, deposit books and slips, statements and envelopes, employees' salaries, bookkeeping equipment, space rent, a proportion of general overhead and clearing house membership.

Cost analysis has shown that checking accounts having an activity of 10 or more checks a month must maintain an average daily balance of $100 in order to be self-supporting. From the figures of cost and possible income you can figure how your bank stands on your account.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—At a public dance Martin Forbes, Chicago newspaper man, is pleasantly attracted by one of the girl dancers. He cuts in on her partner, a man whose name he learns later is Max Lewis, and whom he instinctively dislikes. The girl tells him her name is "Rhoda White." He overhears a conversation between her and an unknown woman who realizes concerns Rhoda. Sensing a good newspaper story, he informs the girl of a "blind ad" signed "C. J. J." inquiring for the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland," which lifting from the talk he overheard, he is convinced is the girl's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it.

CHAPTER II.—That night Rhoda finds the advertisement. The sight of her discarded name (Martin was right) recalls her childhood in a California town. Her mother died, she is happy with her father, professor in a small university, until misfortune comes. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce, who becomes in her childhood a mysterious work. Rhoda, by chance, learns of his death and afterward, stenography. When she is sixteen her father dies suddenly, leaving her a small inheritance. She is then living with her mother, who is a widow. She is then living with her mother, who is a widow. She is then living with her mother, who is a widow.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Martin has supper with Rhoda and Babe. He is told the girl's apartment has been broken into and $300 Rhoda had laid away. He has learned that the mysterious "C. J. J." of the advertisement is Charles J. Porter, uncle of Max Lewis, and living at the Worcester hotel. The girl admits her name is McFarland, but tells Martin little else of her history. A mysterious "Claire Cleveland" asks Rhoda for an interview.

CHAPTER IV.—Rhoda meets Claire, who tells her she knows her father well and is anxious to secure a document belonging to her which she says she has hidden. Claire also reveals knowledge of the trick which wrecked her best friend, and a false charge of violation of the Mann act. She warns Rhoda to beware of Porter, who she says is looking for the paper, but finds the trunk in which were all her father's possessions. She tells her she had sealed, been stolen.

CHAPTER V.—Rhoda, convinced that Claire has engineered the theft of the trunk, which the girl had told her was in the Worcester hotel, charges her with the act. Claire, of course, indignantly denies it, but Rhoda, her uncle, Max Lewis, and a railroad depot, where Lewis checks it. Martin has an idea. He phones Claire.

CHAPTER VI.—At the depot Lewis is accosted by Babe Jennings. She leads him to believe she is also going to New York. Claire appears and accuses Lewis of trying to "get away." Babe flees, after getting the trunk check from Rhoda.

CHAPTER VII.—Rhoda secures admission to Porter's apartment at the Worcester hotel. He is her father's friend and offers to "adopt" her, but the girl is suspicious. Finally she tells him of the trunk containing the papers, that was stolen.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lewis roughly demands what Rhoda is doing. She tells him Porter sent her. Conley, Porter's bodyguard, appears, and the men begin to fight. In the hall Rhoda, fleeing from the conflict, hears the voice of her uncle, the "C. J. J." who she takes refuge in an adjoining room.

CHAPTER XI

To the Rescue.

BABE and Martin stood staring at each other across a dead telephone. "What do you suppose made her voice sound so funny?" Babe asked. "Sure it was her, are you?" he shot at her. "Oh," cried Babe disgustedly, "don't know Red's voice? Look here, have you really got anything on your mind, or are you just generally cuckoo about her, I mean?" "I've got that Cleveland woman on my mind," he answered, "and a man named C. J. J. Porter, who wants to get hold of her pretty badly, and I don't know why. He's been advertising for her, and somehow or other has managed to find her."

Babe asked rather tensely how he knew. "It was Porter," he told her, "who brought you two down to work this morning in his limousine. Where did he pick you up, just as you were leaving the building here?"

She answered with a nod. "I guess it's my fault, if anything's happened," she said, pretty humbly for Babe. "I know he found her, all right. You see, I answered his ad myself. He telephoned one in, the morning after Max had brought me home. Max had asked me that night if her real name wasn't Rhoda McFarland. I took the ad over the phone and gave Porter's name and address. I'd tried to get Red to answer it the night before, but she wouldn't. It said 'something to her advantage,' and I thought it probably was. So I called him up at lunch time at the Worcester and told him if he'd write her a letter, care of me, I'd forward it to her. I didn't see how that could be, but I must have, somehow. I suppose you'd like to beat me up for butting in like that."

He patted her shoulder instead. "It's no use worrying about that now," he said. "I'm glad you told me. It's between him and the Cleveland woman, then. They are fighting each other, then, and the good thing, but one of them has got her, somehow. If that had been a plain connection she'd have called again."

The telephone bell interrupted him. Babe was nearest and caught up the instrument before he could get to it.

"Red," she cried, "is that you?" "But it wasn't Rhoda. Babe was looking rather puzzled. "No," Martin heard her say. "She hasn't come back yet. We're expecting her. This is her friend, Babe Jennings. —Say, who is this?"

Martin started over to take the telephone away from her, but she clung to it, pressing the mouthpiece tight against her chest. "Martin!" she cried excitedly. "I think it's the woman at the station—the Cleveland woman! Listen, and see if she sounds like she did when you telephoned to her this afternoon."

He'd been motioning to her frantically to take the transmitter away. "She can hear every word you say when you hold it like that. Talk to her! Ask her where she is. Give me the receiver so I can hear what she says."

But all he was in time to hear was the click of disconnection. Claire had hung up on them.

"Well," Martin remarked as he himself hung up, "thanks to that chest trick of yours she knows how we framed her and Max this afternoon. But she hasn't got Rhoda or she wouldn't have called up here to ask for her. That makes the Worcester our best bet. I'm going there now and try to find her. You stick—tight, you understand—to that telephone so that you can answer the second she calls, if she does call again."

With that he snatched his hat and fled. Fifteen minutes later, in a telephone booth in the lobby of the Worcester hotel, he looked up Foster's number and telephoned from there.

When a man's voice answered with a "Hello? Who is this?" he said that he was a reporter from the News and he wanted a personal interview with Mr. C. J. J. Porter. The rather surprising answer came back, "This is Mr. Porter speaking. What was it you wanted to speak to me about?"

Apart from the fact that you wouldn't have expected Foster to answer his own phone, there were two queer things about this. The rhythm of his talk wasn't right. The man wasn't speaking for him. He was being prompted. That meant, of course, that he wasn't Foster, but was impersonating him under orders from some one else. The other strange thing was that his voice was one that Martin half recognized; felt, at least, that he ought to be able to recognize it.

"I don't much want to talk about it over the telephone," Martin said, and then added casually, "and I don't believe you do, either."

Evidently they—whatever they were at the other end—had to go into conference over this remark, for it produced quite a silence. Finally the man who said he was Foster asked, "Who are you? What's your name?" On Martin's telling him he said, "You've really got anything to say you can have my interview. But you'll have to tell me what it's about."

"It's about," said Martin, "the disappearance of Miss Rhoda McFarland. Do I get my interview?" There was a long silence at that. Evidently they were having an argument about it.

"Nothing doing," the voice said at last. "I don't know that she's disappeared. I don't know that there's any such person."

"You don't want to say, then, you've been advertising for her?" The only answer he got to that question was a click which meant that the other receiver had been slammed down on the hook. So Martin hung up, too, and left the booth.

The first thing to find out was the number of Porter's apartment, and of course, the obvious way would be to walk up to the desk and ask the clerk. But instinctively he shied at that. Forster was no ordinary transient guest here. A man as rich as he was, and permanently domiciled here, would have special defenses. You wouldn't be able to mention his name without starting something. The better way would be to drift into casual talk with somebody, a bellhop or the girl who sold theater tickets, lead up to his question and ask it idly.

But it wasn't so easy as it looked, to frame that question so it would sound casual. And if he failed. If his question roused suspicion, he'd be worse off than if he'd gone straight to the clerk in the first place. His gaze was questioning about the lobby, noting everything that everybody did, studying faces in the hope of finding one dull and friendly and un suspicious enough to suit his purpose.

The man who had just come down in one of the elevators and now stood talking to the captain hadn't a face like that; very much the contrary, in fact, bleak and rocky as a chunk of the great American desert and he talked as if he were biting off the heads of finishing nails.

Martin stared at him, regardless of the risk of catching his eye, until, in his own mind's eye, he had put a derby hat on his head and a brown overcoat on his back and a little leather notebook in his hand, and recognized him. He was the man who had come to the studio last night, getting names for the new city directory. And this identification led on so quickly to another that it was like firing the second barrel of a shotgun. This was the man whose voice he had just now been trying to remember. The only thing he could possibly do was to push open the door and walk in and see what happened after that.

Nothing happened. A sense that he had no time to waste all but betrayed him into a mistake. The project that was on the rails of his mind was the one he'd come to the elevator with, namely, to get out the window at the end of the corridor and look into the lobby, and had his hand on the knob when the thought of something else halted him. The helpful bellboy who had remembered Rhoda had spoken of a stairway leading from the office up to Foster's apartment. He turned back at once and started through the suite of offices looking for it.

When he saw it going boldly up from the second room he entered—evidently the stenographers' room, since there were four typewriter desks in it—his first thought was that this was too easy to be true. It wasn't as easy as it looked. He was back to the door, and he had to make a dash for it, and he thought despairingly.

He gained one advantage, though, from this. There would be no harm in making a light and having a look at it. He got out his cigarette lighter and struck a light. There were two small pieces of electrical apparatus screwed to the wall above the door. One of them he recognized as an electric buzzer, and this, as he thought it, seemed rather queer. Why wasn't it the other way around—the push button on the door and the buzzer in Foster's apartment? Why should anyone already in the apartment have to ring a door bell to get into this public office? The door was locked against the office and into the apartment. Well then, it wasn't a door bell.

Of course it was. It was a signal, and once it sounded in the stenographers' room it seemed a reasonable inference that it was Foster's way of summoning a stenographer. But what good was it to buzz for her if she couldn't get through the door? Was the door left unlocked during the day? No, Foster would want to feel better guarded against intrusion than that.

Martin held up the lighter again in an attempt to identify the other thing. He had a hunch that it would be worth looking into. He'd have something to say about it. The ledge of the door was two feet above his head. The top step wasn't wide enough to balance a chair on, but one of those big steel waste-paper baskets down in the stenographers' room would probably hold him up, and would give him a good vantage point. He brought one of them up and tried it. It was going to be a pretty precarious perch and the easy possibility of his falling the whole length of the flight with the basket on top of him wasn't a pleasant one. Well, there was no use thinking about things like that. He got to have a look at the sheet from box that was screwed to the wall beside the buzzer.

He got out his penknife and dropped it, open, into the side pocket of his coat. It and all he had by way of tools. Then, taking one foot on the rim of the basket, he made a sort of spring and clutched the top of the door frame. He found that he could hold himself with one hand, so he got out his cigarette lighter, lit it and stood it on the ledge made by the door frame.

He recognized the little sheet from box. It was a transformer, as he'd had when he was a small boy to run his electric train with. The 110-volt house current came in one side of it from a steel cable. A pair of low voltage wires went out the other side, connecting with a battery, but also going down through a hole in the door frame. Well, he understood it now. The door was held by an electric catch such as are used for inner vestibule doors of apartment houses. A button, probably on Foster's desk, sounded the buzzer and at the same time released the catch. The stenographer had to get to the door before Foster took his finger off the button.

What afforded Martin a broad grin was the thought of Foster's precious security being betrayed by the careless electrician who had put the transformer outside the locked door instead of in. All Martin had to do was to scrape the insulation off the wires and close the circuit and the door would be locked.

Wait a minute, though. He'd have to disconnect the buzzer first. He'd nearly forgotten that, and he turned cold for an instant at the narrowness of his escape. But two minutes' work with his penknife sufficed to accomplish his purpose. As he twisted the two bare ends of the wire into contact he heard a sharp click which announced that the door was unlocked. He sprang down from the basket and opened the door. Luck was still with him. There was no one on the other side. The whole corridor was deserted.

For a moment after he'd closed the door he stood still and listened. He heard a man's voice, momentarily raised in anger; not an old man's voice and not Conley's voice, yet again one that he somehow felt that he should remember. It guided him down the short transverse corridor and to the left down a longer one until it brought him to a halt outside a door. At that point the words became distinguishable and the voice identified itself at the same time.

"Oh, to—h— with the three hundred dollars. All right, I took it. What are you going to do about it?" The speaker was unmistakably Max Lewis, and it seemed equally beyond doubt to Martin that the person he was speaking to was Rhoda. With no warning knock he opened the door and stepped in.

There was a good deal more light in here than in the corridor and he had to blink his eyes into focus before he could see very well. It was a girl Max was talking to, but she wasn't Rhoda. She was facing him and before Max could turn she rapped out, "Who are you? What are you doing here?"

Martin could never forget that voice. It was Claire Cleveland. He realized as she stared at him that she could have no idea who he was. She'd never even glanced at him before. All she could recognize him by was his voice. He didn't answer her question.

"Stay right where you are," Max said to Martin. His face was blotchy with rage, yet there was a vicious sneering look of exultation about it. "You've come to exactly the right place. I've got something for you." Then he wheeled on Claire. "You can get out and you needn't wait for me. I'm going back, either. I'm through with you. You'd better go quietly. If my uncle finds you're up here you'll be riding in a patrol wagon before you know it."

The opening of the door seemed somehow to bring her to a decision. She stood still considering for a moment before she walked out. "All right," she said, "I think I'll just let him know I'm here and see what he does about it. You see, you really are too much of a fool."

AUTUMN
[For The Courier-Gazette]
A silver river of liquid light
Catching sparks from an autumn moon
Casting with jewels a velvet night,
As on its way it murmurs a tune.

The frost spirit catches the river mist
That lingers like smoke about the place
The nature's curtain, moonbeam kissed,
Changed to floating filmy lace.
A deafening roar and swirling spash,
Small quiet pools set here and there,
The surging waters roll and lash
They may the calm and quiet share.

So, rushing lives and quiet lives,
Served by the same beneficent hand,
Find in this scene the binding ties,
And cheer each other's lonely heart.

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—it is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name: Charles H. Fletcher the largest schools in the country and that several of these schools have repeatedly tried to secure the services of Mrs. Sargent in the capacity of instructor. The costs of the local school, exclusive of board and incidentals, amount to less than one-half that demanded by the large city schools. Rockland Commercial College gives its graduates the same fine training as the metropolitan institutions, finds lucrative positions for all graduates and has the advantage of small city prices or the opportunity for students to live at home during their study at the college.

Courses are provided in Accounting, Teacher-Training, Civil Service and Secretarial Science. The subjects taught include bookkeeping, accounting, shorthand, type-writing, spelling, business law, business English, correspondence, rapid calculation, penmanship, arithmetic, advertising, banking, commercial teaching, civil service, office practice, adding machines, duplicating devices, filing, business organization and management. These courses and subjects are presented with a degree of thoroughness and consistency that guarantees the type of boy or girl who receives a diploma.

pend entirely upon the ability of the student to master his subjects. High School graduates are preferred though this is not a rigid entrance requirement.

Few schools have a better plant than this. It is ideally located in the very heart of Rockland's business section, on the 4th floor of the Senter Crane Company building. Extraordinary window space provides ample light, properly, and at the same time affords an incomparable view of Rockland Harbor and Penobscot Bay and islands. Elevator service at call provides ready access and the class rooms are

Mrs. Lena K. Sargent, Principal of Rockland Commercial College

Students may enter classes at any time. It is not necessary to start in September, because the individual method of teaching is used. Those whose work keeps them from joining the school until November or February have the same opportunity as those entering the first of the year due to the carrying on of the courses for the individual pupil rather than classes. The length of time required for completion de-those desiring an opportunity to work part board or room.

The qualifications of the faculty measure largely the results which may be expected of the students. Mrs. Sargent has had an extraordinarily intensive and varied preparation for her present responsibilities. She trained at the Shaw Business College in Bangor and taught there two years following graduation. She then served as bookkeeper for the Glencoe Woolen Mills and Old Town Woolen Mills. Following this very practical training she taught commercial subjects in Milo High School for three years and then became head of the Rockland High School Commercial Department, remaining there eight years. For the past six years she has operated her own school.

This busy career has been supplemented by summer courses at Simmons College and Columbia University, service in the office of President Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad in Bangor, service in the law offices of the Oxford Paper Co. and special work at the University of Maine. This brief survey shows why Mrs. Sargent may feel well qualified for her job. Associated with her for the past four years has been Mrs. Nellie Ballard of Rockport, a product of the local school retained as instructor through marked ability.

A feature of special interest in connection with the school is its rehabilitation department. Under this plan any person who is suffering from a severe physical handicap caused by either accident, disease or natural causes, may enter the school and take the complete course with the State taking care of tuition charges and all books and materials.

It should be borne in mind that Mrs. Sargent is an active, teaching principal and takes a personal interest in every student. Visits, phone calls etc. are welcome at all times from parents or guardians. Those desiring further details about entering the school may phone 990-M or see Mrs. Sargent by appointment.

A cold does 3 things
"Pape's" stops them all

A cold always affects you in at least three ways. Air passages are inflamed and irritated. Perspiration is checked. Bowels are clogged with acid wastes from the mucous discharge. So doctors say you must do three things to be rid of a cold.

Pape's Cold Compound does all three! It reduces inflammation and swelling of the mucous membrane; it induces perspiration; opens the bowels. Chew one of these pleasant tablets and see how quickly nasal discharge stops; head clears; breathing becomes easy. See how that aches, feverish, weak feeling disappears. And "Pape's" doesn't stop with killing cold germs. It activates bowels and removes germs and acid wastes from the system. All drug stores—35c. Just remember "Pape's".

"Every student who has a diploma has a position." This simple statement tells in a nutshell the splendid record and accepted status of the Rockland Commercial College. No finer endorsement could be given any school. No greater compliment could be paid the school and its faculty than the consistent demand for graduates by local business houses.

The sixth year of Rockland Commercial College under the successful principalship of Lena K. Sargent is under way with 30 students enrolled. The night school will open Oct. 6 with classes on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. The one session plan is used days, classes convening at 8 o'clock and being dismissed at 1 with a brief recess midmorning for refreshment. The evening school hours are 7 to 9. It is interesting to note that this school uses the same teaching methods and text books found in

THE SONG OF THE FACTORY SEWING MACHINE

[For The Courier-Gazette]
There are songs of heroes and songs of
Of riders and maidens, till hardly a thing
Of beauty or value deserving of praise
Has quite escaped notice by those who write lyrics.
Yet no one has written, so far as I've seen, The Song of the Factory Sewing Machine.

'Tis a song of power, a song of speed,
The purr of the shuttle, the click of the feed.
As the needle steps on at a lightning-like tread,
Leaving its trail of the lock-stitched thread,
Making hundreds of thousands of garments more Than ever were dreamed of in days of yore.

Hear the whirr of the shaft and the slap
of the belts,
Ever driving the needle through cloth
and through pellets,
Binding together and giving the form
To numberless garments to shelter us warm;
For among the things which people require
Let us thank the inventor, whose name
And whose inventions from his time till now
Who, thinking and working, by toll and trouble,
The machine to its present perfection have brought.
This story of effort to meet human need is a story familiar to all who can read.

To God and to them all honor and praise;
To him who their comforts and lengthen
their days;
Let the bread they cast forth return of their
For these men have worked for the comfort of men;
And hundreds of factories throughout the land
To them shall forever as monuments stand.

There's a BIG DIFFERENCE between Wise Investment and Speculation . . .

THE WORLD is full of people who have discovered to their sorrow, that there is no royal road to riches. Fortunes may be made over night, but more frequently, they are lost in the mad effort to "get rich quick."

Many wage earners in this vicinity have wisely invested in the preferred stock $6 Dividend Series of Central Maine Power Company. They know that they hold a security which is: a safe investment, certain of a good return (yields 6%), exempt from normal Federal Income Tax, and which has a ready market.

Katherine Starrett of Warren was a weekend guest at the home of Mrs. May Robbins.

John Anderson of Cribhaven was recently a visitor with his two daughters at this place, with Mrs. Fred Spear and Elizabeth Anderson.

The masquerade ball held at East Union Grange hall Friday night by the seniors of Union High School was a successful affair. The hall was prettily decorated with colors in keeping with Halloween, dainty pumpkins holding prominent places and adding to the attractiveness, and about 50 couples participated in the festivities. Music was furnished by the Robbins orchestra.

Miss Katherine Starrett and Miss Elizabeth Anderson enjoyed dinner last Sunday at Rose-Anne Lodge.

Mrs. Lilla Morton and children were in Washington Friday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Morton.

A detour is something a motorist takes when he sees one truck trying to pass another coming toward him. Judge.

SUPERIOR COURT CONVENES

Judge Fisher Makes His Initial Appearance On Local Bench—Many Divorces Pending

The November term of Knox County Superior Court was well under way when this paper went to press, being apparently well steered by Justice William H. Fisher of Augusta, who is presiding on the local bench for the first time. Business affairs have brought Judge Fisher to Rockland on numerous occasions, and to his list of friends will be added many more as the term progresses.

The chaplain this morning was Rev. George H. Welch, pastor of the Church of Immanuel.

Sheriff Frank F. Harding has made the following disposition of his deputies: Crier, Granville N. Bacheider of St. George; in charge of grand jury, Jethro D. Pease of Hope; in charge of traverse juries, Arthur D. Fish of Appleton and William B. Holder of Cushing. The other deputies in attendance are C. Earle Ludwick of Rockland and Charles A. Cavanaugh of Rockport.

County Attorney Ensign Otis and Clerk of Courts Milton M. Griffin are two officials who are busy up to their elbows.

Jerome C. Burrows is acting in his familiar capacity as messenger.

The grand jury plunged at once into a session which is quite apt to last into Friday. The traverse jurors report Wednesday morning, instead of Thursday as has been stated.

Our weather forecast for the term is that it will last eight days and that there will be cloudy skies for some of the participants.

The above cases have been entered since the May term.

THIS LOOKS GOOD

Wyman Station, Bingham, Has Record Output—Big Water Storage

The output at Wyman Station, Bingham, is averaging 600,000 kilowatt hours daily, nearly as much as the company's other 22 stations combined, and the lakes back of this development have sufficient storage to maintain this output for the balance of the year, stated G. S. Williams of the Central Maine Power Company, following a study of water conditions on the Kennebec completed today.

Mr. Williams said that the water in storage above Bingham is over 13 per cent greater than last year at this time. The additional storage facilities provided by Wyman Lake will also have an important bearing in steadying the flow of the river in drought periods. In the top 25 or 30 feet is a draw down of 3,000,000,000 cubic feet of water. Along in February or March, should there not be sufficient flow in the regular river flow, this additional storage could gradually be released maintaining the flow of the river until the spring runoff. The storage would then be filled ready again for any emergency.

Unusually good water conditions exist on the Androscoggin and the various other watersheds of the State with the result that Maine power companies, largely hydro-electric, are anticipating one of the best operating years for some time.

Interconnections were made this year at Veazie between the Bangor Hydro Electric Company on the north and the Central Maine Power Company system in the central part of the State. Previously a tie-in had been made between the latter company and the Cumberland County system so that now there is a physical connection of power lines extending from the extreme southern portion of the State to Aroostook and Washington Counties on the north and east. This represents some 400 miles of transmission lines as the crow flies covering territory served by three operating companies.

The value of this interconnection has been apparent from the start. The Bangor Hydro System, with an abundance of water has relayed its surplus power over the lines of the Central Maine system where it has been largely passed on to the steam generating system of the Cumberland County Power and Light Company. So far this year, over two and a quarter million kilowatt hours of hydro electric energy have thus been interchanged to replace power which must otherwise have been generated from fuel.

Such operating economies are bound to react to the benefit of the entire State and provide an elasticity of service that will guarantee large blocks of power to any section covered by these three companies.

WANTS A "DRIPPING WET"

Chicago Mayor Comes To New York On a Democratic "Harmony" Errand

An attack on Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, thrust to the fore the New York Governor's reputed presidential aspirations as Mayor Anton J. Cermak, Chicago's wet Democratic mayor, arrived to confer with Eastern party leaders.

Cermak wants, he said, a "dripping wet" candidate and he gave the formula for such a man as one of the "Al" Smith type. He praised the availability on those grounds of James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator from Illinois.

"A man of the 'Al' Smith type has got to be the nominee if the Democrats hope to win," the Chicago Mayor asserted. "If Gov. Roosevelt is wet enough to be governor of New York and to be supported by Smith, he is probably wet enough for the national needs of the party. But when I speak of a man of 'Al' Smith type I mean James Hamilton Lewis."
